

June 25, 2024

Ingenta PCG and the Social History Archive Partner to Provide Libraries with the World's Largest Digital Archive of UK Historical Resources

The Social History Archive, a brand-new resource for academics and researchers has launched, offering access to the largest collection of British and Irish historical resources online.

Catering to a range of academic interests, the digital archive contains over 14 billion records which offer centuries of data and insights. Through access to a diverse range of source material, including newspapers, census returns, crime reports and emigration records, researchers can delve into the people, places and events that have shaped the world.

We have partnered with Ingenta PCG to help us to bring this beloved resource to institutions. We are proud to work with Ingenta PCG to ensure the Social History Archive is available to institutions in North America. "This partnership is core to our mission of growing the Social History Archive and maintaining its unparalleled standards of excellence", said Brian Donovan, Director of Findmypast and the Social History Archive.

The Social History Archive is launching with four packages catering to a range of departmental requirements:

- Records – the entry level subscription gives users easy access to the complete repository of records, excluding the 1921 Census of England & Wales
- Records+ – in addition to everything included in the 'Records' subscription, researchers will be able to access the unique and invaluable 1921 Census – the last to be published until 2051.
- Newspapers – user-friendly, online access to The British Newspaper Archive, the largest collection of historical British and Irish newspapers online, with 30m pages covering over 300 years of history.
- Access all areas – unrestricted, unlimited access to everything The Social History Archive has to offer.

"Ingenta PCG is proud to represent the Social History Archive to North America libraries. Together we provide unparalleled knowledge and expertise within the market and an opportunity to own the world's most prestigious cultural organisations and archives, including The National Archives and the British Library." said Heather Lantz, Director of Business Growth for Ingenta.

Scott Winner, CEO, Ingenta PCG said, “Our expertise in sales and marketing is currently contributing to the Social History Archive launch and broadening its reach to an even wider audience.”

Sarah Bush, Managing Director, said:

“We’re delighted to launch the Social History Archive to the academic community, offering a goldmine of historical primary source material to benefit a huge range of specialisms and faculties. Whether you’re researching UK history, geography, sociology, journalism, politics and economics, or even data science, this growing collection provides a vast and varied record of life over the centuries.

“In collaboration with our partners and users, we’re constantly working to develop our offering. We’re committed to delivering a product powered by the latest technology and a growing repository of records, which together provide a world-class experience for researchers.”

ENDS

For more information, to request images or to discuss feature opportunities, please contact:

Madeleine Gilbert, Senior PR Manager, Findmypast: pr@findmypast.com

Heather Lantz, Director of Business Growth, Ingenta heather.lantz@ingenta.com

NOTES TO EDITORS

About Findmypast

Findmypast is a fast-growing, technology-driven, subscription service. With a bank of more than 14 billion digitised records, and exclusive access to some of the world’s most renowned historical databases, Findmypast’s technology allows customers to connect to people, both past and present, and visualise their family story in more detail than ever before.

With a global community of over 13 million registered users, this innovative and agile British technology company has strong network effects and is trusted by some of the world’s largest archives, museums, and governments. Findmypast is building a team of world-class technology professionals where people from every background come together to help millions of others understand theirs.

About Ingenta PCG

Ingenta is a world-leading provider of content solutions that transform business. We provide business solutions to media markets through highly configurable software and services deployed into complex business environments with knowledgeable and engaged staff, and superior service and support. Listed on the AIM market of the London Stock Exchange, the company operates jointly from Europe (Oxford) and North America (New Jersey).